Members of the Domesday Book Committee working on their various tasks...

Everyone on the committee shared much of the work, especially collecting information, writing up the entries, proofreading, fund-raising and the launch of the book. There were many meetings to decide on every tiny detail of the final version during an interesting (often hilarious) two year campaign!

Molly Collishaw - photographer extraordinaire who risked life and limb climbing the Church tower and lying down in roads and/or mud to get a good angle! It was Molly who began the whole project and kept us all going!

Barbara McEwen working on the map of the village (she is also responsible for the wildlife illustrations and the gravestone motifs) sustained by story tapes including the entire Harry Potter oeuvre!

Jane Fraser spent hours working on the computer compilation, layout of entries and the additional text. She is hoping to regain the use of her hands shortly...

Bob Naismith with sketch pad. Bob was the computing guru as well as administering the printing of the book, and designing and drawing the headers and footers.

Dorothy Chahal in-putting and sorting the entries. Dorothy was also responsible for the organisation of the launch party.
