

ADVERTISEMENT
Advertise with
Stuff

Calm days after goldfield heist

14:43, Jan 31 2009

MIKE CREAN/THE PRESS

Nestling: the Manor House at Woodside is built of local bricks.

Gold was never found at Woodside, although a goldrush put it on the map and the end of the golden age wiped it off again. Between times, Woodside was the scene of a famous gold robbery.

Up this gully the diggers tramped towards the goldfields of Waipori, Tuapeka and Dunstan, in Central Otago, nearly 150 years ago. Later, up this glen, and onto the Dunstan Trail, probing far across the high plateau beyond, bumped the coaches of Cobb and Co.

MIKE CREAN/THE PRESS

Former glory: the old store, at Woodside, near Outram on the Taieri Plains.

Back down this glen came the gold coach with its armed escort of grizzled troops. Some had seen action in the Crimea and during the miners' revolt at Eureka Stockade in Victoria, Australia.

At Woodside they paused before pushing on to the hotel and police camp at nearby Taieri Ferry, where they stayed the night before the last stage of their journey to Dunedin.

When residents heard that this passing parade had attracted the infamous Henry Garrett to the area, they bolted their doors and barred their windows.

ADVERTISEMENT
Stuff

Garrett was New Zealand's first bushranger. He had been transported from England to prison on Norfolk Island for crimes in his homeland. On release, he heard of gold discoveries in Otago and headed there.

He was associated with Richard Burgess who, with accomplices Kelly and Levy, was later hanged for the Maungatapu murders near Nelson, after a fourth gang member, Sullivan, testified against them.

Garrett led a bunch of pistol-packing ruffians who preyed on diggers returning from the goldfields. At Woodside Glen, which is now a pretty picnic area, his gang held up 15 diggers heading for Dunedin with gold in their pockets, in late 1861. The gangsters tied their victims to trees and made their getaway with a small fortune.

Garrett reached Sydney before he was captured and brought back to Dunedin for trial. After serving a term of hard labour, he was released but re-offended and was locked up in Dunedin jail again. He was then transferred to Lyttelton where he completed his time. Free at last, he spent the rest of his life impressing people as a writer and speaker.

As I stroll around Woodside in gentle rain, it is not Garrett's ghost I sense, but the spirit of worthy pioneers and community leaders.

People like James and Catherine Fulton, who built the the former Sunday School, that became a community hall in the 1860s. It looks tumbledown now but the name Fulton remains prominent.

Two generations later, Jules Fulton and friend Robert Hogan formed roading company Fulton Hogan near here.

Another early settler, Francis McDiarmid, arrived from Scotland on the immigrant ship Philip Laing, in 1848. Sturdy Scots, like him, built sturdy homes, like Woodside Manor. This impressive baronial homestead was built of local bricks in the 1860s.

If there is a ghost, it is a happy one -- that of large and genial Woodside hotel keeper J. Iveson. He operated the daily coach service to and from Dunedin. Frequently he would come out from behind his bar to drive the horses.

When Woodside began its decline, around 1880, Iveson had his hotel jacked up and moved four kilometres to Outram, where he re-established his business.

Outram's star was on the rise. The Taieri River was bridged there. A branch railway line from near Mosgiel reached there in 1877.

Outram today is a picturesque blend of building styles, from late Victorian to modern, at the foot of the highway that soars over the Otago highlands to Middlemarch, and on to the Maniototo area. It is home to 700.

While Outram prospered, Woodside wound down. It once contained a sawmill and flourmill, a general store and post office, bootmaker's and baker's shops, various tradesmen's workshops, a school and hall.

Much of the store and Post Office remains, converted to living quarters. Several old cottages have been charmingly restored. The school and hall are derelict.

Woodside village is a shadow of the past. Only a handful of people live here. Few from outside the Taieri Plain have even heard of it.

Dunedin families who have discovered Woodside Glen choose to drive out there on sunny days, down narrow, hedge-lined lanes.

They plant their deckchairs and picnic tables on the lush grass, beneath the bush-clad hillside. They don't mind that diggers with bulging pockets once picked their way down this gully, boasting of their success.

Or that bushrangers lay in wait here for the easiest of pickings.

paid content

about this content

Are You Over 50? This game is a must - No Install

RAID

[Photos] Shameless Vintage Ads That Were Once Socially Acceptable

History Chronicle

Doctor: If You Suffer From Ringing Ears. Do This Immediately!

healthgoodtop.online

People Born 1951 - 1979 Get This Benefit In March

Reassured

[Photos] Why You Should Always Put a Towel Under the Hotel Door

The Primary Market

The Royal Family Is Cringing At Meghan Markle's Net Worth

Money Pop

[Pics] At 53, This Is Vin Diesel's Real-Life Partner

<https://locksmithofhearts.com/>

[Photos] Mom Struggled to Understand Why Her Photo Went So Viral, Then Saw the Background

The Primary Market

ADVERTISEMENT
Advertise with
Stuff

most popular

---

- 1 Anger over Government moves against property investors
- 2 Sorry Jacinda Ardern, your housing policy isn't likely to tilt the market for people like us
- 3 The bets the Government is making with its sprawling housing package
- 4 Dozens of fire crews fought 'massive' blaze at Tūākau meat processing plant overnight
- 5 Israel Adesanya claim he would rape a rival UFC fighter can 'normalise threats of sexual violence'
- 6 America's Cup: Robot sailor was Team NZ's secret weapon
- 7 Wellington courier driver admits to keeping nearly 90 parcels for himself
- 8 Watch: spiders invade homes amid record-breaking flooding in Australia
- 9 Black Caps vs Bangladesh: Captain fantastic Tom Latham guides New Zealand to ODI series win
- 10 The end of BBQs or a load of hot air? The proposed ban on natural gas connections

Neighbourly | Travel Bookings | Play Stuff | Stuff Coupons
Death Notices | Stuff Events | Advertising | Careers
Privacy Policy | Cookies Policy | Terms & Conditions
Editorial Code | Contact Us

Breaking news?

Send your photos, videos and tip-offs to newstips@stuff.co.nz, or call us on 0800 697 8833

© 2021 Stuff Limited

